

The Threat Library is a knowledge base of repressive techniques used by the enemies of anarchists and other rebels and repressive operations where they've been used—a breakdown and classification of actions that can be used against us. Its purpose is to help you think through what mitigations to take in a particular project and to navigate resources that go into more depth on these topics. In other words, it helps you arrive at appropriate operational security for your threat model.

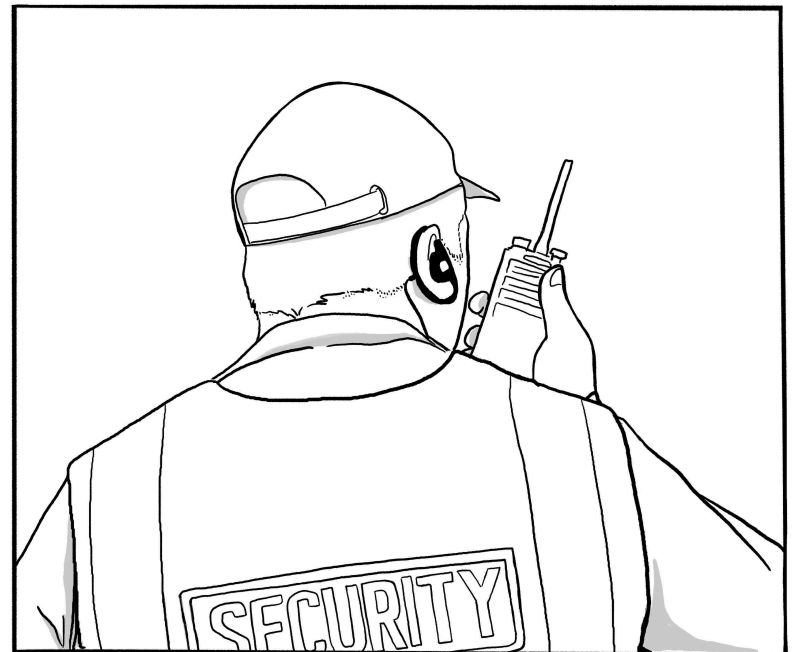

No Trace Project / No trace, no case. A collection of tools to help anarchists and other rebels understand the capabilities of their enemies, undermine surveillance efforts, and ultimately act without getting caught.

Depending on your context, possession of certain documents may be criminalized or attract unwanted attention—be careful about what zines you print and where you store them.

8.2. Repressive operations

The Threat Library aims to reference repressive operations that have targeted anarchists or other rebels anywhere in the world, and that feature interesting repressive techniques that are representative of local State repression. In order to diversify our coverage we are particularly looking for operations outside of Western Europe or North America, but we welcome contributions from these regions as well.

On the night of May 4 to May 5, 2024, an excavator was set on fire at the construction site of a highway project.<sup>1</sup> On October 12, 2024, Louna was arrested and accused of setting the excavator on fire. Several other people were arrested and released soon after.

CCTV footage from the arson site showed two people setting fire to the excavator, and one of them burning themselves accidentally. In the hours following the arson, Louna was brought by car to a nearby hospital, where she was admitted for burns allegedly compatible with those visibly suffered by the person who burned themselves in the footage.

After her arrest, Louna was detained in isolation for four months —she was in isolation because she was in a men's prison despite being a (trans) woman.<sup>2</sup> After her arrest, she claimed responsibility for the degradations against the excavator. She is currently under judicial supervision pending trial.

In 1983, five people were arrested and accused of being part of a group called Direct Action, which had carried out several actions in Canada in 1982, including the bombing of an electrical substation and the bombing of a factory belonging to the American defense contractor Litton Industries.<sup>86</sup> In the weeks prior to their arrest, they were planning to rob a guard of the cash handling company Brink's.

The main evidence in the case came from conversations recorded by microphones hidden in the group members' homes.

After several trials from 1983 to 1986,<sup>87</sup> the five people were sentenced to prison, with sentences ranging from ten years to life imprisonment. By 1990, all of them had been released on parole.

The June arson charge was based in part on a physical surveillance operation conducted on the night of the arson. The May arson attempt charge was based in part on incendiary devices found intact at the site of the attempted arson and on the raid of a storage unit rented by Jeff Luers.

In a first trial, Jeff Luers was sentenced to 22 years and 8 months in prison, which was reduced to 10 years on appeal in 2008.<sup>82</sup> Craig Marshall was sentenced to 5 and a half years in a plea deal.<sup>83</sup>

On December 8, 2020 several raids took place across the country and nine people were arrested.<sup>31</sup> One person among them, Libre Flot, was under surveillance by French intelligence services since 2018, when he came back to France after spending a few months in Rojava.<sup>32</sup> The other eight people didn't all know each other but all knew Libre Flot. After the arrests, seven people (including Libre Flot) were accused of being part of a terrorist association that was planning attacks against French institutions.

To identify the phone numbers used by some of the defendants, investigators analyzed correlations between different sets of data, obtained through:<sup>33</sup>

- Real-time geolocation of phones, through the collaboration of mobile network operators (#3).
- IMSI-catchers (#3).
- Covert location surveillance devices (#2).
- Physical surveillance (#3) operations.

Some of the defendants spent time in pre-trial detention, with durations ranging from 4 to 16 months. Libre Flot was detained in isolation for 16 months.

In a 2023 trial:<sup>34</sup>

- Seven defendants were sentenced to prison, with sentences ranging from 2 to 5 years (parts of the sentences were suspended prison sentences).

Some of the people were charged with possession of explosive materials. Some were accused of being part of an association de malfaiteurs (criminal association).<sup>38</sup>

After a trial in 2021 and an appeal in 2023, three people were given 4-month suspended sentences, and the others were acquitted.

6.16. Network

Country: Russia (p. 33)

Date: 2017 - 2020

Technique used:

Physical violence (#3)

In late 2017 and early 2018, about ten people were arrested in Penza and Saint Petersburg<sup>39</sup> and accused of being part of an underground organization called “Network” that was planning terrorist attacks in anticipation of the 2018 Russian presidential elections and the FIFA World Cup.<sup>40</sup> Some were also accused of attempting to sell large quantities of drugs. Most of them were tortured in the early stages of their detention by the Russian Federal Security Service (FSB).

The initial arrests that launched the investigation were made because most of the defendants from Penza were involved in the drug business.<sup>41</sup>

After two trials in 2020, seven alleged members of the “Network” organization in Penza were sentenced to prison terms ranging from 6 to 18 years,<sup>42</sup> and two alleged members in Saint Petersburg were sentenced to 5 and a half and 7 years in prison, respectively.<sup>43</sup>
